Trademark Laws

According to the US Trademark Law, and International Trademark Law, Trademarks are a legal construct that protects the right of an organization to use a distinctive sign, name, etc., to identify its products and services to its customers. The idea behind this is to prevent confusion within the marketplace between one product and another or dilution of that particular trademark/servicemark.

A trademark, as described herein is any name, logo, design, nickname, acronym, or other designation of Eclectic Movement, Inc. or its products/services which is used in any promotional materials, informational releases, or other communication with third parties. Trademarks/Servicemarks may be registered or unregistered, and become Eclectic Movement's proprietary property upon their use in any commercial or public material or communication.

All Eclectic Movement trademarks should be attributed with the proper trademark symbol and footnoted on all presentations that are displayed publicly, whether in hard copy, or electronically.

Always use a trademark as an adjective followed by a generic noun. Do not use the trademark alone as a noun, pluralize the trademark or make it possessive. Do not change the form of the trademark or abbreviate it.

Correct usage: Eclectic Movement® service

Incorrect usage: a service through Eclectic Movement®

Eclectic Movement is the owner of all rights, titles, and interest in the Eclectic Movement brand, its other trademarked brands and its logos. No person or entity may reproduce or use the Eclectic Movement brands, trademarks or logos in any manner other than expressly authorized by Eclectic Movement. Unauthorized use of Eclectic Movement brand is strictly prohibited.

Servicemark Laws

A service mark is a type of trademark that is used to identify and distinguish the source of services, not goods. It serves the same purpose as a trademark but is used for services instead of goods. Service marks are protected under the Lanham Act and International laws and similar rules related to registration and infringement apply to both.

Trademark/Servicemark Infringement

Any use of Eclectic Movement, Inc., and/or its affiliates worldwide Trademarks/Servicemarks, without Eclectic Movement prior written consent may constitute infringement and unfair competition in violation of the laws of the United States of America (Federal and State laws) and International Laws.
